Wine is made to be enjoyed and appreciated

We encourage you to look at our extensive wine list and perhaps choose something you are not familiar with, one that is likely to maximise your enjoyment of the food you have selected. Our Sommelier is pleased to help you with your choice and hopefully introduce you to wine that you appreciate to its utmost. We stock the very best vintages. If you would prefer something less esteemed please ask.

What appeals to us about wine? The sight of the label at the time the wine is chosen is important for some, perhaps the look of the wine in the glass excites you, but then the aroma it gives off is often very special, finally the taste, if this is to your liking, then a convivial time is assured.....

The appearance of the wine often betrays the grape variety, its age and its quality.

The smell, or “nose” of the wine, often gives experts the origin of the bottle, its age and the grapes used to make the wine.

Then the taste. This is the most important step for almost all wine lovers.....

Savour every moment of the taste of this wine, how it feels in the mouth, what primary fruit or floral flavours are evident, and what can be said about the locality the wine was produced from; the magnificent French word terroir says it all. It encompasses the soil type, the quality of the vines and the effect of a good growing season.

All these factors may be in harmony, but then it is the skill of the winemaker to produce the very best wine from all the components; from the date the grapes are picked, the time spent fermenting, the processes the grapes are subjected to; all these factors combine to make the wine good, indifferent or poor.

The pleasurable length of the after-taste in the mouth is the measure of a fine wine; how does this one compare with others you can recall.....

Finally, try to combine fine wine, fine food and fine company. Put it together and enjoy Whitfield House Luxury Retreat to the full.....
